

Storm

Lyrics by ann kathrin lüthi

Everything means a bit more today
Walls cut the air
I was blinded before
Now I see you everywhere

Another storm is yet to come
I can feel it in my head
Closing walls invade my home
Old memories are coming back

I can see you standing there
In my mind you've never left
Into the void I often stare

Everything is out of place
Nothing's like it was before
The storm invades my space
It obstructs the only way I know
The way that only we would go

Silence is hard to break
When a whisper means the universe
Some words are hard to take
Bring no relief are not unheard

The night returns with her black veil
The end of something not over yet
I will be back to tell the tale
The smell of home you don't forget

Everything is out of place
Nothing's like it was before
The storm invades my space
It obstructs the only way I know
The way that only we would go