

Tell me my Love

By Annakin

The house I inhabit
And the rooms I live in
Are my extended body
My outer skin

The liver, the lungs, the veins
They are my working place
The soul, my heart and the brain
Define my private space

My blood is running through
My membranes
It's like someone I once knew
In this kitchen full of drains

With the weight of my bones
I support the breathing walls
I reach out for my home
When I hear your distant calls

Tell me my love
What will I do if all hell breaks loose?
Tell me my love
Will I still be the one you choose?

Sheltered by a night
As dark as it can be
I see the light
Through the windows in me

With the weight of my bones
I support the breathing walls
I reach out for my home
When I hear your distant calls

Tell me my love
What will I do if all hell breaks loose?
Tell me my love
Will I still be the one you choose?

I love until I cry
I cry until I laugh
Tell me my love
I love until I cry
I cry until I laugh
Tell me my love

Tell me my love
What will I do if all hell breaks loose?
Tell me my love
Will I still be the one you choose?
