

Secret Wounds

The stars they hardly shine tonight
They're far away lanterns throwing a shy shy light
They hang above us in the sky like ghosts

These high expectations I simply can't meet
Come haunt me come chase me through the night as you please
Where you are already waiting to feed
On my secret wounds

Till the sun makes you all disappear

Happiness has always been a fragile moment in time
It is never truly yours and it never will be mine
And it doesn't have anything to do with how i feel
In my secret wounds

But the sun makes them all disappear

I should know better by now i know
I've learnt that step by step is how we go
And to leave the past with its sharp undertone
And my secret wounds

Till the sun makes them all disappear